

Law and Society

INTERDISCIPLINARY

Faculty

Marla H. Kohlman
Interim Director, Assistant Professor of Sociology

Ric S. Sheffield
Director, Associate Professor of Sociology and Legal Studies (on leave)

Those faculty members who teach courses approved for credit in the Law and Society Concentration constitute the program's extended faculty. Consult the director for a list.

Kenyon's Law and Society Concentration is an acknowledgment of the increasing importance within the best liberal-arts institutions of programs that emphasize the study of law, legal institutions, and the legal profession. This program is designed to provide students with a comprehensive, coherent curricular structure within which to examine a plethora of law-related issues that emerge across disciplines and for which these various disciplines seek, if not to find the correct answers about law, to ask appropriate questions.

Students pursuing this area of study will ponder the relationship between law and human behavior and the role of law in society. They will focus their work in three primary areas: philosophies of law, law as a social institution, and law and government. Students will begin their exploration of law in society with the Introduction to Legal Studies and conclude it with a Senior Seminar in Legal Studies, which will encompass a directed research project within a selected theme or topic.

Introduction to Legal Studies is a survey course which attempts to expose students to a variety of disciplinary approaches to the study of law and legal phenomena. It is intended for students who have attained at least sophomore standing and have had some exposure to the social sciences, usually through an introductory course. The Senior Seminar in Legal Studies is open to juniors and seniors who have taken Introduction to Legal Studies and at least two other courses counting toward fulfillment of the concentration requirements (or to students with permission of the director).

The Law and Society Concentration requires students to complete 2 1/2 units of "specified" law-and-society coursework. These units comprise the following: Introduction to Legal Studies (LGLS 110 or 111, 1/2 unit); a semester's work in a philosophy-of-law subject area (philosophy, political science, or history offerings, 1/2 unit); two courses in two different departments examining "law as a social institution" (1 unit); and the Senior Seminar in Legal Studies (1/2 unit). See the director for a list of approved courses.

First-Semester Courses

Introduction to Legal Studies

LGLS 110 (1/2 unit)

Staff

This course examines the law, legal profession, and legal institutions from a variety of traditional social-science perspectives. The primary frame of reference will be sociological and social psychological. The objective of the course is to expose students to a variety of interdisciplinary perspectives on law and to encourage the examination of law-related phenomena through the literature of multiple disciplines. Topics to be covered include law as a social institution; law as a social-control mechanism; a history of law in the United States; the U.S. criminal justice system; philosophies of law; law and psychology; comparative legal cultures; and law and social change.

This survey course is intended to encourage and facilitate a critical study of "law in society" and serve as a foundation from which to pursue the study of law and legal issues in other curricular offerings. This course is required for those students who intend to complete a Law and Society Concentration. Prerequisites: sophomore standing or higher and permission of instructor. Enrollment limited.

Individual Study

LGLS 293 (1/2 unit)

Staff

This course is for students who wish to do advanced work beyond regular courses or to study topics not included in course offerings. Prerequisites: permission of instructor and program director.

Individual Study (Intermediate)

LGLS 393 (1/2 unit)

Staff

Prerequisites: permission of instructor and concentration director.

Senior Seminar in Legal Studies

LGLS 410 (1/2 unit)

Staff

This is an upper-level seminar that offers students in the concentration an opportunity to integrate the various topics and approaches to which they were exposed in the law-related courses they have taken. Each year, the senior seminar will be designed around a specific substantive theme or topic; the themes as well as the format and approach to the course will change from year to year, depending upon the faculty members teaching the course and their interests. The topic of this year's senior seminar will be "Crime and Punishment." Prerequisite: permission of instructor. Enrollment limited.

Individual Study (Advanced)

LGLS 493 (1/2 unit)

Staff

Prerequisites: permission of instructor and concentration director.

Second-Semester CoursesMedia and the Law

LGLS 220 (1/2 unit)

Staff

This lecture and discussion course will introduce students to the law, legal profession, and legal systems as they are portrayed, presented, affected, and utilized by the media. The primary frames of reference from which to examine both issues and legal phenomena will be sociological and social psychological. Students will examine the significant role that the media play in the American justice system as well as the critical legal issues that the media face in pursuing their craft. Central to the foundation of this course is an exploration of the meaning of the speech and press clauses of the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Topics to be explored include government censorship, libel, invasion of privacy, obscenity and pornography, impact of press coverage upon the right to fair trial, and hate speech. A portion of this course will focus on understanding the role of the media in relation to crime and criminal justice, particularly through the advent of new technologies.

Another segment will examine the public's perception of law and justice in popular culture, using examples in literature, film, and television.

Prerequisites: sophomore standing or higher. Enrollment limited.

Sociology of Law

SOCY 226 (1/2 unit)

See course description in sociology section.

Special Topic: Law and the Social Order

LGLS 292.01 (1/2 unit)

Staff

In what ways, if any, do laws and legal institutions make a difference to people who have disputes? How is lawyering structured as a modern profession? How do business organizations deal with legal ambiguity in constructing symbols of compliance with laws? How do networks of interpretive communities structure the authority of law? By exploring topics such as these, we seek to understand the distinctive contributions of sociology to the study of law and the social order. This middle-level course can be taken for sociology credit. Prerequisites: foundation course in sociology or permission of instructor.

Special Topic: Law and Social Relations: Persons, Identities, Groups

LGLS 292.02 (1/2 unit)

Staff

Even as law presents itself as an autonomous institution for the resolution of social conflict, one with its own rhetorical codes and adjudicative practices, it remains embedded in and often a catalyst for the very struggles over culture, identity, and power that it seeks to mediate. This course examines the content given to various social identities, particularly those of race and gender, by the American legal system at specific historical moments; and the interplay and clash of those legal constructions with other voices asserting their own versions of experience of identity.

This mid- to upper-level course can be taken for sociology credit. Prerequisites: foundation course in sociology or permission of instructor.

Individual Study

LGLS 294 (1/2 unit)

Staff

This course is for students who wish to do advanced work beyond regular courses or to study topics not included in course offerings. Prerequisites: permission of instructor and program director.

Individual Study (Intermediate)

LGLS 394 (1/2 unit)

Staff

Prerequisites: permission of instructor and concentration director.

Individual Study (Advanced)

LGLS 494 (1/2 unit)

Staff

Prerequisites: permission of instructor and concentration director.

Additional courses available another year:

LGLS 276 Women, Law, and the Constitution

LGLS 277 Select Themes in U.S. Legal History

LGLS 283 African Americans, Crime, and the Law

SOCY 229 Women, Crime, and the Law

SOCY 257 Law and the American Family

Also check other departmental listings for courses granting law and society credit. In previous years, such courses have included:

PHIL 115 Practical Issues in Ethics
PSCI 302 Supreme Court and

American Politics

RELN 380/SOCY 243 Ethics and Social Justice