The Asian Studies Program at Kenyon offers an interdisciplinary concentration that incorporates a variety of courses in anthropology, art history, economics, history, language, political science, and religious studies. The program also sponsors films, invites speakers to the College, and promotes other social and cultural events to stimulate campus awareness of the societies of East and Southeast Asia, India and its neighbors, and the Islamic world.

With Asia as its point of reference, the curriculum encourages students to deal with Asian peoples as actors on the scene of regional and world history, rather than as objects of non-Asian peoples' enterprises and observations. An important goal of the concentration is the development of a critical understanding of the ways in which people of the interrelated regions of Asia have historically defined and expressed themselves.

The concentration in Asian studies comprises three elements:

(1) at least one year of language study; (2) 1 1/2 units of coursework in selected areas of Asian culture, including an approved foundation course; and (3) a one-semester senior seminar. The concentration enables students to study formally the histories, cultures, and societies of Asia in a comparative and interdisciplinary format.

Concentration Requirements and Curriculum

1. Language study

One year of instruction in a relevant Asian language is required. This requirement can be met by taking two semesters of Modern Chinese (CHNS), Japanese, or Sanskrit at Kenyon, or three semesters of Classical Chinese (CHIN). The equivalent of one year of approved college-level Asian language instruction at another accredited academic institution will also meet the requirement, as will some intensive summer programs. With the prior approval of the director of the Asian Studies Program, a student may use a semester of intensive language study abroad to fulfill the language requirement. In the case of transfer students, credit will be accepted for a year of Asian language study with a grade of C+ or better pursued at another institution. If the program committee determines that a student possesses native proficiency in an Asian language, it will waive the requirement.

The program committee strongly recommends that students continue language study beyond the first year.

2. Area and disciplinary coursework

Students are required to take 2 units (four semester courses, including the senior seminar) about Asia outside of the Department of Modern Languages and Literatures. These courses must be from the list of courses offered under Asian studies at Kenyon but may also include relevant courses taken in study-abroad programs. Students are strongly encouraged to build comparison into their curricular choices by taking at least one course representing a region of Asia different from that of their language study.

Courses not specifically focused on Asia will not be counted toward the concentration. Where any doubt arises, please ask a member of the Asian-studies faculty. Double-counting for the major and the concentration is permitted.

3. Senior Seminar: Asia in Comparative Perspective

This 1/2-unit course is required for students fulfilling the requirements for the Asian Studies Concentration and is open to other students on a permission basis. The course will be offered every spring under the direction of a selected Asian-studies faculty member and will meet in a seminar format.

Course content will be organized around a common theme that integrates the various disciplines and regions of Asia that students have been studying at Kenyon. Through readings, films, guest lectures by other Kenyon Asian-studies faculty members and outside speakers, and other activities, the course will lead students to synthesize their academic and personal (e.g., off-campus) experiences in a broader comparative perspective. Students will produce work that examines one or more topics of their own special interest within the comparative Asian framework.

Beginning Asian Studies

First- and second-year students may begin almost anywhere. See the list of all the Asian studies courses offered in the current year.

Students hoping to spend all or part of their junior year in China or Japan should certainly begin to study the appropriate language in their first two years at Kenyon. New students interested in Asia who have not yet declared a major or a concentration are welcome to seek specific advice from any of the Asian-studies faculty members.

Off-Campus Study

Off-campus study in Asia is not required, but it is highly recommended. Students should consult Asian-studies faculty members and the director of international education for the numerous opportunities available to Kenyon students to study in Asia for one semester or a year. Summer language-study programs are also available for students who need to prepare for off-campus study or desire to learn an Asian language not offered at Kenyon (e.g., Hindi, Urdu, Korean, Vietnamese).

First-Semester Courses

Elementary Classical Chinese

CHIN 111 (3/4 unit)

Finefrock

Classical Chinese is an introduction to the classical literature of China. It is not a spoken language. (See Modern Chinese [CHNS] in the Department of Modern Languages and Literatures for spoken Chinese.) No previous language study, including Modern Chinese, is required. Students who have already studied Modern Chinese should take CHIN 211 as their first course in Classical Chinese, instead of CHIN 111. Students learn ten characters and read ten lines of Chinese per day. The course moves at a pace that allows discussion of works read. There is a daily vocabulary quiz and in-class reading assignment. There is also a midterm and final. Students read in class from the first day, and by the end of the year (assuming they continue by taking CHIN 112) they will be able to read simple prose with the aid of a dictionary.

In CHIN 111, students learn 700 characters or grammatical particles, learn to write characters in stroke order, and learn basic pronunciation skills for Classical Chinese. Translation of Classical Chinese poetry is an important part of this course, with students compiling a book of their translations into English. The course is suitable for students seeking a reading knowledge of Chinese poetry to inform and enlarge the scope of their own creative writing in English, as well as students wishing to learn a language through translating its literature.

The course is taught in English. No prerequisites, but native speakers must take a more advanced course.

Classical Chinese Literature in English

◆ CHIN 115 (1/2 unit)

Finefrock

This course is a survey of classical literature, including poetry and prose, in China. The course is taught in English using English translations and assumes no previous knowledge of Classical Chinese. No prerequisites.

Intermediate Classical Chinese

CHIN 211 (1/2 unit)

Finefrock

This course comprises readings in Classical Chinese and is taught in English. No prerequisite, but CHIN 111 and 112 are advised.

Advanced Classical Chinese

CHIN 371 (1/2 unit)

Finefrock

This course covers readings in Classical Chinese. It is taught in English. No prerequisite, but CHIN 211 and 212 are advised.

Second-Semester Courses

Elementary Classical Chinese

CHIN 112 (3/4 unit)

Finefrock

See first-semester course description of CHIN 111. In this course, students learn 700 additional characters and are able to use a Chinese dictionary easily. As in CHIN 111, there is a midterm and final, and students compile a book of their translations.

Intermediate Classical Chinese

CHIN 212 (1/2 unit)

Finefrock

See first-semester course description of CHIN 211.

Advanced Classical Chinese

CHIN 372 (1/2 unit)

Finefrock

See first-semester course description of CHIN 371.

Senior Seminar: Asia in Comparative Perspective

ASIA 490 (1/2 unit)

Schubel

This year's senior seminar for Asian studies concentrators will compare religion in various Asian settings. For centuries, religion has served to both to unite and divide the peoples of Asia. Great transnational religions such as Buddhism and Islam have served to link together people of different ethnic and language groups. On the other hand, religious identity has often led to competition and conflict between religious communities. In the modern period, the rise of “fundamentalisms,” new religions, and anti-religious movements have all left their mark on the peoples and cultures of Asia. This course will explore religion in a variety of times and places. Topics to be addressed include the relationship between religion and ethnicity, the role of transnational religions in the creation of civilizations, the role of religion in the development of nationalism, and religious conflict and cooperation across the Asian continent. Enrollment limited to seniors. This course serves as the capstone for the Asian studies concentration.
